A Summary of Earth History

according to those who live on it

A couple of hundred years ago, Earth was on the verge of extinction. Overpopulation was high and resources were all but gone. Nations and borders vanished - people were too hungry to care.

Then, somewhere amidst the desperation, the more scientifically-minded people of Earth worked out how to live on the Moon. And the Great Revolution began.

The first generation had it worst, but they had drive and passion on their side. They were the ones who industrialised the Moon and cleaned the Earth. By the time things were done life was still hard but money, hunger, and borders were gone.

The second generation reaped the rewards, refined them, and made the processes sustainable. They had a vague idea of what their parents went through. It was a time of great prosperity.

Those that followed have never known differently. They're arseholes.<sup>[citation needed]</sup>

A black and white comic book panel. In the foreground, a man with a mustache and a concerned expression looks towards the right. He is wearing a t-shirt with the text "I'M KIND OF A BIG DEAL!" printed on it. In the background, a woman with long hair, wearing a crop top and a skirt, is walking away from him. The scene is set outdoors on a sidewalk.
